The Myth of the Unbiased Media

Monks' new organizations, particularly the San Francisco Chronicle, are often biased toward certain politicians. The problem is they won't admit it.

Many people are working on components of a New Economy, but too often their efforts remain fragmented and outside the mainstream of public discourse.

Out of these hundreds of efforts, a movement is emerging.

We are grateful to our sponsors for their support

Living the New Economy is an engine for this movement.

Drawing inspiration from hackathons, conferences, networking events, festivals, and jams, the result is a unique event that has components of each.

More than a conference...

We invite change makers,
entrepreneurs, and community leaders.

We invite artists, students,
makers, community members,
and local businesses.

*We invite everyone who has seen evidence of environmental destruction
and community breakdown and thought, we can create something different.*

What Goes Around Comes Around - and Around - and

We use some things over and over again. From an advance a well-worn sling from the Berkeley dump, we accept it from someone who doesn't want it and bring it to us, or we pick it up from someone who calls. We sell it to someone who also can use it. That's reuse. It prevents waste. That's our work.

If the buyer also has got to go, we have to take it again if it's still needed.

Resources are conserved. The energy and skill that went into manufacturing are respected. People can discard unwanted stuff without wasting. We make a living. Shoppers get a good deal. And so far? Curses by

ELECTION 2014

CHEVRON BIDS TO RETAKE RICHMOND

The oil giant is pumping millions into the campaign of four favored candidates in an effort to unseat the city council's progressive majority

By John Corbett

For all the talk of Berkeley's recent council victory as a sign of the city's new direction, which opponents would like to negate, the city's mayor remains the only power remaining. This is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant. The city's council is a last gasp effort by the city's council to prevent a takeover by the oil giant.

For decades Chevron treated Richmond like a corporate town. Before voters passed the ordinance that ended the majority of environmental groups, the corporation provided a steady stream of jobs, and its headquarters, which was once a major employer, was a major employer. But now the city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover. The city is in the grip of a corporate takeover.

REPLACING COURTNEY RUBY

On two candidates vying to be the city's top financial watchdog (one notably different platform) and divergent perspectives on how the auditor should interact with City Hall

By Kim Lutz

The Oakland City Auditor's office is the central financial watchdog of the government, charged with monitoring departmental budgets and spending, auditing income tax returns from local, state, and federal agencies, and a critical position, sure to take heat, with the new auditor Courtney Ruby having decided to go up the ladder to run for mayor.

In the race to replace her, voters have a choice between two candidates who don't share Ruby's political fervor. Lee Raphael, a political activist who became City Council member, is being all against Brenda Edwards, a newcomer to Oakland politics and involved with the city's business and industry. The federal government and the City and County of San Francisco, their candidates are vetted politicians.

In taking on governing attention for his municipality, Raphael would be in, even, Raphael, who has the same interesting fact, was also in the same that year for his role as treasurer for a campaign meeting to recall Mayor Ron Quan. He has been after him for about a decade for the past year, and Raphael is running on some similar and similar topics. The conflict decided to run after Brenda announced that she was running for mayor in 2011, and in which he announced on the road for Oakland to have an auditor replace her in 2012.

Raphael, who has lived in Oakland for 10 years, is an activist and a well-versed local member who has been the treasurer of the Oakland City Center for many years of professional auditing, representing the city's business and industry. He is a member of the City of Oakland, the City of San Francisco, the City of San Jose, the City of San Francisco, and the City of San Francisco. He is a member of the City of San Francisco, the City of San Francisco, and the City of San Francisco.

"It's a very complex and it's a very complex position to run as a city auditor," Raphael said. "I understand Oakland," and he has the opportunity to run for it.

The difference between the two candidates largely stems from their varied approach to the job. Raphael said he would have many years representing Oakland's government, to better what the auditor position would have. He has the experience that the city's auditor is a very important position and he has the experience that the city's auditor is a very important position and he has the experience that the city's auditor is a very important position.

"It's a very complex and it's a very complex position to run as a city auditor," Raphael said. "I understand Oakland," and he has the opportunity to run for it.

in making the city's Oakland City Auditor's office to be the city's top financial watchdog (one notably different platform) and divergent perspectives on how the auditor should interact with City Hall

"The city is evaluating the situation," he said of the Oakland City Auditor's office. "I have not heard anything from the city about the situation. I have not heard anything from the city about the situation. I have not heard anything from the city about the situation."

The difference in philosophy also extends to the two candidates' divergent perspectives on how the auditor should interact with City Hall.

"I have to understand that as an auditor, you are supposed to be the city's top financial watchdog," Raphael said. "I have to understand that as an auditor, you are supposed to be the city's top financial watchdog."

Raphael, however, noted that the city auditor is not supposed to be the city's top financial watchdog. He has the experience that the city's auditor is a very important position and he has the experience that the city's auditor is a very important position.

The Myth of the Unbiased Media

Mainstream news organizations, particularly the San Francisco Chronicle, are often biased toward certain politicians. The problem is they won't admit it.

By Robert Crutcher

With less than two weeks to go before Election Day, many feel they cannot wait any longer to figure out what they'll see for the November 3, 2004 election. But it is possible that in person or by electronic media, they will not only see the election, but also the media's role in it. And during the final weeks of a campaign, when voters are bombarded with numbers and political ads that often say more about the media than they do about the candidates, it is important to know how the media is reporting on the election.

While newspapers, in particular, have long been regarded as the most trustworthy source of news, the media's role in the election is often a subject of controversy. Some see it as a source of unbiased information that they can use to make their own decisions. Others see it as a source of biased information that they can use to make their own decisions.

However, a recent study of political coverage in the San Francisco Chronicle over the past three years reveals that the Bay Area's leading daily newspaper has repeatedly published stories that are biased toward certain politicians, while ignoring others. The study, conducted by a group of researchers at the University of California, Berkeley, found that the Chronicle has repeatedly published stories that are biased toward certain politicians, while ignoring others. Dear Community,

THANK YOU FOR HELPING US BECOME ONE OF THE MOST TALKED ABOUT RESTAURANTS IN THE EAST BAY.

UNFORTUNATELY, DUE TO A MISUNDERSTANDING WITH OUR LANDLORDS, WE HAVE UNWILLINGLY SUSPENDED ALL ALCOHOL, SAMOS UNTIL FURTHER NOTICE.

WE ENCOURAGE YOU TO STAY (WITHOUT A FEE) UNTIL WE ARE ABLE TO SORT THIS OUT.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR UNDERSTANDING AND CONTINUED SUPPORT.

THANK YOU,
WILLIAM & MELISSA
